English Language Fellows Program

The English Language Fellows Program at the Center for English Language and American Culture (CELAC) provides a select group of students the unique opportunity to develop educational, leadership, and interpersonal skills for success in multicultural and international settings.

Students in the Fellowship learn how to engage effectively with non-native speakers of English, including building English tutoring skills.

Fellows are trained to be multi-culturally sensitive and culturally competent.

Fellows gain leadership abilities through organizing activities for English language learners and international students.
